Welcome!

Welcome to Tomah!

Whether you're here for a stay or just passing through, we want to welcome you to our community! Tomah is centrally located between Minneapolis, Chicago, Madison, and Milwaukee, making it the perfect spot to host your next in-person meeting or family reunion.

As you read through this guide, we hope you notice the fun things to do and see in the greater Tomah area. Be sure to also check our community calendar at tomahwisconsin.com for other events that may have been added after the print of this publication.

The guide that you're holding is brought to you by many of our local businesses who have invested in Tomah. During your stay, be sure to visit our shops, restaurants, and parks. If you have time, enjoy driving through either the self-guided Amish or Cranberry tour. (To respect the Amish religious beliefs, please do not take photos of the Amish.)

Thank you for visiting us, we hope you have enjoyed your stay and plan to return. If you have questions about our community, feel free to reach out to the Tomah Chamber and Visitors Center. We're here to help!

Cranberry Country Tour

Did you know Wisconsin is the leading producer of cranberries in the world? More than half of the world's supply of cranberries are grown on 250 Wisconsin family farms. Cranberries are Wisconsin's No. 1 fruit crop, generating more than $1 billion dollars in economic revenue and 4,000 jobs.

Native to the marshlands of central and northern Wisconsin, Native Americans harvested wild cranberries for centuries. Commercial cranberry production in Wisconsin began in the 1850's.

The most exciting time of the year in Cranberry Country is harvest season, which typically begins in mid-September and runs through October.

Contrary to what most people believe, cranberries do not grow in water. Cranberry beds are flooded at harvest because cranberries contain four tiny air pockets and will float. Harvesting methods vary depending on whether the crop will be sold as fresh fruit or turned into processed products like juice, sauce, and dried cranberries.

Another beautiful time to visit is when the cranberry vines are in bloom, which depending on mother nature, happens from late June into early July. A great opportunity to see the tiny pink blossoms up close is on Cranberry Blossom Day. The event is hosted annually by Wetherby Cranberry Company on the last Saturday of June.

Cranberry Country Tour

The Wetherby marsh also hosts marsh tours during the annual Warrens Harvest Day Celebration on the first Saturday of October. Along with a marsh tour, visitors can pull on hip boots and have their photo taken standing among floating cranberries. For details on those two events, visit their website at freshcranberries.com

You can tour Cranberry Country any time you're visiting the Tomah area. We suggest starting, or ending, your tour at the Wisconsin Cranberry Discovery Center in downtown Warrens. From Tomah, take Superior Avenue/Highway 12 north to County Hwy O (about six miles from downtown Tomah). Turn right onto Hwy O and travel about 4 miles to Warrens. Housed in a historic cranberry warehouse building, the Wisconsin Cranberry Discovery Center features an interactive exhibit hall, a gift shop offering Wisconsin-made cranberry products, including an old-fashioned ice cream parlor serving cranberry ice cream. The Center's hours vary by season, so check their website at www.discovercranberries.com for current hours.

Our suggested tour route is 22.5 miles, so you'll want to allow about one hour to see all the sights. The route will take you past two dozen cranberry marshes, but not all are visible from the road. We've listed information for those marshes that have roadside signs to help you pinpoint your location.

Starting from the Wisconsin Cranberry Discovery Center, travel across the train tracks on Main Street and turn right onto County Hwy EW as you leave Warrens. You'll see the sign for Gebhardt Cranberry Marsh/Whiskey Creek Cranberry on your right. This marsh was started in 1968, making it one of the newer marshes you'll see on the tour. Many of the marshes are 100 years or older.

Cranberry Country Tour

You'll travel about 2 miles down EW before you will see the sign on the right for the Russell Rezin & Son Cranberry Marsh, which celebrated its centennial in 1918. As you pass by the cranberry reservoirs or ponds bordering the road, look for bald eagles, trumpeter swans, loons, and other waterfowl. Cranberry marshes also provide habitat for sandhill cranes, whitetail deer, muskrats, otters, coyotes, wolves, and other wildlife. Past the ponds you'll find more cranberry beds belonging to the Rezin marsh along both sides of the road.

Many cranberry marshes in our area are multi-generation operations. We have families who have been growing cranberries for five, six, and even seven generations, including family members of the James Potter Cranberry Marsh, which is the next marsh on your right.

Ahead on the left is Potter Cranberry Company. Established in 1871 and owned by the Potter family since 1912, the marsh is one of the oldest in the Warrens area.

Cranberry Country Tour

Continuing on, take a right on to Auger Road to see Wetherby Cranberry Company. This marsh is owned by the Van Wychen family, who produce their own cranberry wine and sell fresh cranberries in season. Third generation cranberry grower Nodji Van Wychen also offers tours by appointment for a fee.

When departing from Wetherby Cranberry Company, turn right on Hwy EW and then left on Augusta Road. Here you can get a closeup view of the Potter Cranberry Company marsh. On the right are sections that are being renovated. The 12 original beds are being converted into two 15-acre beds. The oldest beds on the left were planted in 1928 and are still producing cranberries 90 years later.

Stay on Augusta Road until it intersects with Crampton Road where Hancock Brothers has a sphagnum moss processing facility. Wisconsin is the only state in the U.S. to commercially harvest sphagnum moss. You can see sphagnum moss spread out on the sand to dry before it is packaged and sold to garden centers and plant nurseries. The long-fibered moss holds 20 times its weight in water, making it invaluable for keeping nursery stock alive in shipment.

At the intersection of Crampton and Beltz Road is a sign for Beltz Cranberry Company owned by the Steve and Betty Gebhardt family. Some of the Ocean Spray commercials featuring two comical cranberry growers were filmed on the Gebhardt marsh.

Continue east on Crampton Road and on the left you'll see a sign for Gebhardt LLC, also owned by the Gebhardt family. Before being planted to cranberries in the 1990's, a mint farm operated in this area. The peppermint oil was extracted for use in flavoring candies, toothpaste and other products.

Crampton Road intersects with county Hwy HH. The marsh sign is a few yards to the right, but directly in front of you is QRS&M Cranberry Company. This cranberry marsh was started in 1877. Prior to that, the sawmill community of Chaplin was located on this property.

Turn left on to Hwy HH. As you head west on HH, you will see a sign on the right for Farmland Management's Jackson-Meadow Valley Marsh. Old timers still call this the Case Marsh. Russel Case purchased government land in 1876 that had wild cranberries growing on it. The marsh stayed in the Case family until the death of Robert "Bob" Case - Russel's grandson - in 1975.

Bob Case was an inventor and built on of the first mechanized cranberry pickers. For a time, Bob had his workshop in the Union Cranberry Company warehouse that now houses the Wisconsin Cranberry Discovery Center. One of Bob's early raking machines is on display in the museum.

The next sign you'll see, also on the right, is for Scott Cranberry's East Marsh. Started in the 1870's, the marsh was purchased in 1918 by Judge John Stevens and settled on by his daughter and son-in-law Genevieve and Archibald Scott in 1921. The marsh has been in continuous operation by members of the Stevens/Scott family since that time and is currently a fifth-generation family farm.

One mile further east on HH is JR Nemitz Cranberry Company, which has beds located on both sides of the road. The Nemitz family diversified their farm in 2014 by planting Aronia, which, like cranberries, are native to North America.

Aronia berries are small, dark purple berries that have become popular among health-conscious consumers. The family has 24,000 bushes on 20 acres, which are harvested in late August.

Two more miles down HH is Walworth Cranberry LLC. The Walworth, Nemitz, and Wetherby marshes were all part of the Union Cranberry Company at one time. When the owner retired, he offered his three marsh managers the opportunity to buy the properties they managed. Charles Walworth and his son Dale purchased the Central Marsh, as it had been known, in 1973.

Turn left on to Hwy O and travel three miles, passing by additional cranberry marshes, back to the Village of Warrens and the start of your tour.
